Total Project Cost	£3,072,974	Amount Requested	£3,072,974
-----------------------------------	------------	-------------------------	------------

Project Description
The aim of this project is to increase the re-integration of politically motivated ex-prisoners into society on a regional basis, while recognizing the fact that the various ex-prisoner groups and constituencies will still face different opportunities and challenges. Consequently the project will work with the collective range of ex-prisoner groups, in both loyalist and republican constituencies, on three specific themes: Conflict Transformation &amp; Peace building - Learning From Experience; Citizenship Development; Social Change Leadership.

Fit with Programme
This project will involve the engagement of primarily loyalist politically motivated ex-prisoners and combatants to move away from conflict and towards peace by increasing their re-integration of into society on a regional basis, and empowering them to make a positive contribution within their local communities/constituencies, in such a manner that they are seen to be complementary to other activists and agencies. Issues to be addressed at local level will include divisive emblems/events; interface issues; community regeneration; engagement with young people; and both anti-racist and anti-sectarian initiatives.

Project Description
The aim of the project is the creation of a new shared space ‘urban village’ in inner East Belfast, free of the traditional territorial markings, through the redevelopment of a 2 acre brown field site. The development will be located on the Newtownards Road between Dee Street and Templemore Avenue. This village, built round a specially created new street with a village square, will model new approaches to economic activity, training and education, access to services, housing and community interaction, including that between the traditional communities in NI and the new ethnic minority communities in East Belfast.

Fit with Programme
This project will bring together representatives of both communities at an urban interface area to create a new shared space on a brownfield site which will focus on meeting a broad range of community needs in the area on a cross-community basis through a new jointly managed facility accessible to both sides of the traditional divide in the area.
